Glossary

One night, little Elisa starts to cry. At first, her cries are soft like a cat's meow, but they quickly become louder until they cause the flowers to wilt and the birds to escape.

Her family and neighbors try moving her bed, bundling her up, cooling her off, and even tying a ribbon around her wrist, but nothing seems to help.

After a sleepless night for everyone, it's the grandmother's intervention that uncovers the reason. Elisa releases a fart that rivals the roar of a plane taking off, along with the noise of nine blenders on full speed and twenty-seven loud hair dryers. And then she falls fast asleep.
